Yes definitely! A must for MBA program

Yes, very useful class for students without financial background

Yes, it's essential

Absolutely yes.

Depends on goals and previous experience. Would recommend to waive if you've done forecasting or have taken a previous finance class

Absolutely, everyone should know how to deal with finance, whether for their company or even personally. This is a great introductory course to teach you the importance of a diversified portfolio and how the stock markets function.

Yes – Sraer is an excellent lecturer and the course is well–designed and I learned a lot more than I was expecting to in seven weeks!

Absolutely. Prof. Sraer is a great asset to Haas, and it would be worthwhile to sit in one of his finance classes.

The material will be challenging if you are new to finance, but the big picture concepts are tools you will take with you throughout your career.

Yes

Yes, solid professor. The professor carries that class well and is passionate about the subject.

YES!! Absolutely recommend! As a core course, I really think this knocks it out of the park in terms of essentials.

Yes. Solid foundation in finance for people from different professional or academic background.

Absolutely. It lays a great foundation to understand finance.

Yes. Only concern is that the language can be a bit hard to fully understand but people get used to it after a while

Yes, if you have a background in finance. Otherwise, topics go through very quickly and it's easy to lose sight of the fundamentals or big takeaways due to the density of information in each class.
